Mr. E. Lamb has filed suit against Julia Nuu to foreclose mortgage. The claim is for $7000 due on a promissory note made by the late Isaac Nuu in 1901, together with interest, taxes and insurance paid. The note was secured by a mortgage on property on Fort street containing the Star block.

Another postponement of the trial of Katsuato, the Japanese charged with killing a fellow workman last month at Kahului, has been made. It was expected that he would have his hearing in the Police Court today, but the Grand Jury is taking the testimony of some of the witnesses in the case, and the examination in court will not take place until May 4.

The two Japanese arrested for removing goods from Hamana's store were brought up before Judge Hawaiian for trial on the charge of larceny and were found guilty and fined $100 and costs each. Their attorney then began habeas corpus proceedings, demanding the release of the defendants on the grounds that they were entitled to a jury trial, which they had asked for and been denied.

Perhaps you are a collector of postal cards. If not you ought to be. The fad has come to stay and is both interesting and enteraining. Loose cards lose half their value. They should be placed in an album, where they can be properly displayed. You will be interested in our line of albums if you are interested in postal cards.
The names of the albums are so prepared that the corners of the cards are lifted into slots and may be removed for inspection at any time without in any way damaging either the card or the album. Honolulu Photo-Supply

READ POE'S BOOKS

Few people have not read "The Raven" and "The Bells", by Edgar Allan Poe, but his wonderful prose works have only recently begun to be appreciated.

Poe's marvelous imagination has originated many splendid short stories which have been the inspiration of many more recent writers.

Dr. A. Conan Doyle, for instance, admits using Poe's "Dupin" as the model for his "Sherlock Holmes."

If you want to get a glimpse of Poe's great genius, get a set of his books.
